INTRODUCTION: This material is being collected and saved to maintain a historical record. I have collected these rates from many lists, most of them several decades old. I do not know what some of these conditions are or what the modern terms for some are. Some of these numbers are similar to Rife frequencies, but they are not frequencies. I do not claim that any of these rates are useful to diagnose or treat any disease or condition and this list is not intended as medical advice. No claim is made that any equipment that can use these rates will benefit any disease or condition.

These rates have been developed for resistor based equipment with five or six knobs. That is, the first knob is 100,000 ohms per click. The second knob is 10,000 ohms per click, and so on. In every case, the first number of the rate has been set on first, or far left knob. If the number is a 0, set 0. For 3 or 4 digit numbers, the developers of these rates started with knob 1, put in the numbers, and the rest zeros.

For the 18 knob EMT units (Elton Pigg units), set all knobs to 0. Then start with the second row. The first knob in the second row is marked 100K. That is now your first knob for these rates. If the rate has a note that it is for Elton Pigg units, start with knob 1.

If you want to know the actual resistance for a 5 digit rate, add a 0 to the rate. For example, 05000 is 50,000 ohms. 80300 is 803,000 ohms.

To activate supplements or water, place the material on the copper screen for 8 hours or more. Use a maximum of 3 activations.

To use activations directly on pets, place them on the copper screen for up to 15 minutes for organ and tissue stimulation and up to an hour for other settings.
